Description:

About the Author Tadzia Treadwell is strong willed 37 year old God fearing woman. Who was born in Winston-Salem, North Carolina. She is an aspiring writer, poet and singer. Raised in the Cleveland Avenue Homes project housing community. She began a career as a housing inspector trainee for the City of Winston Salem and later as a housing inspector for the Housing Authority of the City of Winston Salem. She was an inspiration for many people in her community with her street smarts and savvy attitude. She was 23 years old when she found herself owning a home, driving a fine car and getting the attention as a young vibrant black female who got married and was on her way to great heights when all of a sudden a totally unexpected plan for this woman of God began to unfold and found she herself losing it ALL. She ended up moving to Atlanta, Georgia homeless, ashamed and alone. That's when she realized that like Jonah she was running from the very calling she had on her life as well as running from herself. Until one day her Heavenly Father (God) said, "Stop, Come Here...Let Me Tell You Something!" Kicking and screaming the entire way, Tadzia slowly paused and said, "Yes Father, I am here. What will you have me to do." God replied, "Write!" So Tadzia began writing by the guidance of the Holy Spirit about the trials and storms that occurred through this tumultuous season in her life to send a message to every woman, man and child that God created. If You will only listen and receive what God has for you in Jesus name. --This text refers to the edition.
